WILLING TO SHARE

Dear fellow teachers

This is an open invitation to all of you working in academic environments in humanities all over the place, in these challenging times of coronavirus, to team up in order to find solutions to the major change from teaching face-to-face to teaching online only. We have opened our site to all of you willing to share YOUR experience with all the members of our community.

Everybody teaching in universities has this problem to solve - fast but effectively. We in the Bucharest Poly are offered the Moodle learning platform as technical support for teaching online, and some of us are implementing additional/complementary solutions, ranging from emailing, mobile telephones, and up to Zoom, Microsoft Teams and so on. What about you, wherever you are?! How are you coping with it?!

We have already come to realize - haven't you, too?! - that it's no easy thing, it is definitely not the same as teaching one's students face-to-face, not many teachers do have specialized training, much previous experience or too long practice. Moreover, time available for adjusting to it is limited, it involves a lot of extra work to be done while actually ... teaching online!

In Romania it is already week 3 of online teaching, so each of us must have already got a clearer idea of the what & why & how to answer the challenge. So, please, everybody willing to communicate and share, consider our call and send us your feelings, teaching approaches, pedagogical principles underlying your online options, as well as ideas & suggestions that seem to work well ... and do not forget to include your students' feedback, wherever possible!

Thus, in all modesty, we do hope to foster quality education, by creating a pool of ideas - feasible, selective and selected, critical ideas, based on sound rationale, for the benefit of the learners, not too sophisticated or for the mere sake of 'playing' with (newly) discovered electronic tools, manageable by many of us in many different settings and taking into account the specific features of our humanistic discipline!

Your texts, sent as Word documents, which can be written in Romanian or in English, should not exceed 500 words, without photos (limited site space ^[2]), with a title of max. 10 words, to facilitate access. These should not be scientific papers, but rather quasi semi-formal contributions.

To remain hopeful, if things go better and we can launch our 14th International Conference 'Language, Culture, Civilization' - 2020 later this year, we will certainly reserve a dedicated section to this topic then, and welcome your full papers to it!
